

Brad Brown

President

As President of Attevo Federal, Bradford Brown directs the firm's Washington, DC operations serving the US government.

Prior to Attevo, Brad was the President and CEO of OhioOnline, Inc (OOI), a corporate Internet Service Provider and applications development company. Brad started OOI in 1994, when the Internet was in its commercial infancy. OOI used its strategic location in Cleveland, OH to help many notable Ohio brands establish a foothold in the digital world, including The Cleveland Clinic's initial intranet and The Ohio State University's foray into distance learning. During his time at OOI, Brad built a high-speed corporate services network that has been in consistent operation since 1995. In addition, the firm was among the pioneers in building a computer security practice around Internet Protocols. In May 2009, OOI was acquired by Attevo.

A former journalist, Brad Brown wrote for The Washington Post and worked on air as the lead reporter for an NBC investigative reporting team.

Brad has a Bachelor of Science from The University of Tennessee and attended the American University Graduate School of Communications. He has served on the Oracle Reseller Advisory Panel and was recognized for his work in furthering educational technology by the former President of Silicon Graphics.